VALORIZATION OF THE CODEX PURPUREUS ROSSANENSIS THROUGH THE NEW SETTING OF THE DIOCESAN MUSEUM OF SACRED ART

The project for the valorization of the Codex Purpureus aims at a completely new setting of the diocesan museum of sacred art, in order to enhance the works of art kept here.

Our main task is to present new chronological paths so that the visitor can thoroughly enjoy and learn more about the history of Rossano and of the precious byzantine manuscript and what happened to its diocese through the centuries. One wing of the museum will be entirely dedicated to the Codex Purpureus and enriched by historical and multimedia supports.

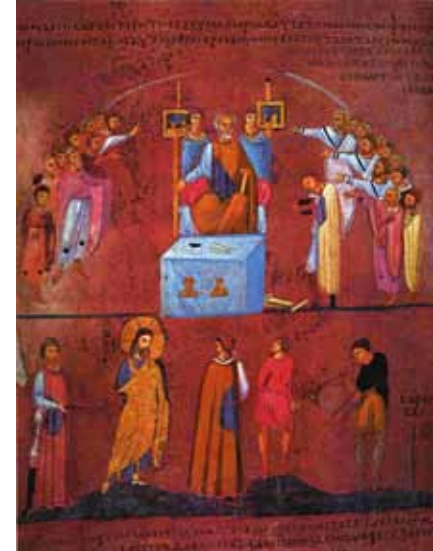

The first room will introduce the visitor, through modern multimedial devices, a Byzantine scriptorium, so to make more comprehensible the technique the codex was made, comparisons with other purple Codexes (manuscript 5111 or Genesis Cotton preserved in the British library in London) the Genesi in Wien (26 sheets, 24 illuminated) the Sinopense fragment in the national library in Paris (43 sheets 5 illuminations) Fragment N in Saint Petersburg (without illuminations) the Beratinus in Tirana (without illuminations).

This room will be a kind of introduction to the exhibition room where the Codex is kept, under a special showcase, along with digital supports that will allow the visitor to browse the precious manuscript. The last room will explain the link between the Codex and the Rossano, through a series of historical hints illustrating how the manuscript arrived here, and the connection with the city
